Writing a high-quality research article is a cornerstone of academic and scientific progression. Despite significant research efforts, many manuscripts submitted to reputable journals face rejection not necessarily due to a lack of scientific merit, but because of common, preventable errors in structure, presentation, methodology description, and adherence to publication ethics. This Faculty Development Programme (FDP) is meticulously designed to equip aspiring and experienced researchers alike with the necessary skills to navigate the complexities of academic writing and significantly increase their publication success rate in indexed, peer-reviewed journals.
