The Faculty Development Program (FDP) on Facilitation Skills Development is designed to empower educators with the competencies required to effectively guide learning, foster engagement, and create inclusive academic environments. In the evolving landscape of higher education, the role of a teacher has transitioned from information provider to learning facilitator. This FDP aims to strengthen participants bility to design interactive sessions, encourage critical thinking, manage diverse classrooms, and promote collaborative learning. The program focuses on key dimensions of facilitation, including communication strategies, active learning techniques, questioning skills, group dynamics management, conflict resolution, and feedback mechanisms. Through experiential learning methods such as role plays, case discussions, simulations, peer teaching, and reflective practice, participants gain hands-on exposure to facilitation tools and strategies.
