All humans are equal in terms of the brain power. However, all do not achieve equally. All new year resolutions are not persevered. All the self-initiated goals are not implemented even with honest intentions. So, one has to be motivated to achieve global standards. However, motivation is not extrinsic. It is intrinsic. This session will explore what is that difference which makes the difference in human achievement. This session will give some definite idea on how to empower ourselves to become globally competitive by marking up our knowledge, skill, attitude and life style. This session will also throw some light on the link between the brain, the mind, the intellect, our attitude, passion in the context of achieving high expectations of the emerging The New India.
